

WA-I- 514 Frame House

Mid-20th century

Hagerstown Vicinity

Private

The one-story frame house is a early 20th century cottage style structure. It is L-shaped with a projecting hipped roof bay along the main facade creating the ell in the house. The main section is also hipped roofed with a flue located at the center portion of the roof. The main facade has a three-section window in the projecting bay and a doorway flanked by a window on either side in the main section. While the house is basically un-elaborate except for brackets on the roof eaves, the house presents a overall ornamental appearance through its shape and use of the hipped roof.

The one-story frame house is a early 20th century cottage style structure. It is L-shaped with a projecting hipped roof bay along the main facade creating the ell in the house. The main section is also hipped roofed with a flue located at the center portion of the roof. The main facade has a three-section window in the projecting bay and a doorway flanked by a window on either side in the main section. While the house is basically unelaborate except for brackets on the roof eaves, the house presents a overall ornamental appearance through its shape and use of the hipped roof.

This property is located on the east side of Rt. 65, .16 mile south of I-70. It is situated in a group of structures on $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ acre lots dating from the mid-29th century to the present time.

The main facade of the frame house is marked by numerous windows. The projecting bay has a three-section window with each section containing a six-over-six pane window. Above these windows is a small attic vent. The main section of the facade is enclosed under a porch roof that runs along the same plane as the projecting L. The porch is concrete and the railing has a cross-shaped bannister. The main doorway has a nine-pane glass section and six-over-six windows on each side of it. The gable ends have two windows of unequal size and a small window in the attic. The roof is covered in an ornamental pattern of asphalt shingles.

There are no significant outbuildings on the property.
